Project

Field(s)	Babylon project - Interdisciplinary issues on a cultural cooperative model
Description	We want to develop a young migrant cultural cooperative¹ based on a transnational learning method by peer review experiences. With the cooperative framework, we want to implement a peer review method as a key instrument to support an inclusive development and planning process for young migrants cultural projects. This method will compare benchmarks or template in details with a very diverse set of local and regional cultural projects across partner countries where the employment rates of young migrant are low. For each cultural project, Babylon will particularly focus on: Theme 1 – Validating young Migrant Competences: projects where young migrants are helped into jobs by getting recognition for their cultural skills and abilities + training on management cooperative skills Theme 2 – Fostering the Development of Anti-discrimination Skills: strategies to help intermediaries and employers to reduce discrimination and other barriers to employment. By building a more inclusive, influential cultural cooperative structure, a European enabling environment will be created for young migrants. This in turn will permit them to create and access economic & cultural opportunities which are currently lacking in regions for vulnerable young migrant people.

¹ We plan to use the status of a "European Cooperative Society" or 'Societas Cooperativa Europaea' (SCE)
